T. C. Douglas finds Bomarc "psychological disaster"

by AARON SARNA

T.C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, said yesterday that Canada's decision to acquire the Bomarc missile and nuclear warheads was impractical and psychologically disastrous.

An audience of six hundred students jammed Redpath Hall to hear the NDP leader challenge the Liberal government's defence policy.

"I do not think that acquiring nuclear weapons is of any military value for Canada," he said. He noted that the Bomarc only has a 400-mile range and Canada's commitment to it is unfortunate. Douglas said that the Bomarc is obsolete and will be replaced by the Pentagon with more modern weapons.

When Parliament reconvenes on February 18, the NDP will press the government to assume a non-nuclear role. "There is a thaw in the Cold War, we have established a détente, there has been a partial test ban, there is better feeling between East and West, and just at this particular moment Canada has decided to become a nuclear power," Douglas stated.

He said that Canada should not join the nuclear club, but serve a useful role in providing leadership to the uncommitted nations and form a highly mechanized peace-making force to aid UN or NATO operations. "This is the time to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons," Douglas emphasized.

Douglas said that automation, and inadequate placement and retraining programs are contributing to unemployment and loss of needed skilled workers. "We have a completely unbalanced economy," he said.

He noted further that "if we had full employment in Canada, we could increase the gross national product by $4 billion a year." The Economic Council of Canada, the Municipal Loan Fund, and the Industrial Development Fund which the Liberals were committed to set up were programs the NDP had originally advocated, Douglas declared.

Portable pensions

Dealing with the controversial contributory portable pension plan, Douglas said that it was a beneficial welfare plan when originally drawn up by Health and Welfare Minister Judy La Marsh.

He said that, under pressure from private insurance companies which found the plan too attractive and disadvantageous to them,

UMUN gives delegates a run for their money

by WENDA McNEVIN

"Our budget may be $12,000, but for the money, we certainly give the students even more than can be expected", claims Tim Brodhead, McGill student, Chairman of UMUN.

It is his opinion that this, the sixth annual University Model United Nations, will be the biggest success to date. Approximately 285 delegates are expected to arrive from universities across Canada and throughout the United States.

There will be 85 countries represented at the UMUN. The students are coming from Queen's, Varsity, Carleton, University of Alberta, U.N.B., Yale, Princeton, Northwestern, Colgate, and many others.

Each university sends a delegation of four students to represent a pre-chosen country. There are often, in addition to the students, advisers from the country in question. Some come from the consulates in Ottawa or Montreal, others directly from the United Nations.

The period from Wednesday,

February 5 to Saturday, February 8, promises to be full of action. The City of Montreal is sponsoring a dinner for the delegates on Wednesday, with William Powell, Chief of Information Services for the United Nations as guest speaker.

Security Council

On Thursday, there will be a meeting of the Security Council in Redpath Hall at 3 pm followed by a panel discussion on the structure of the United Nations under the guidance of Professor Michael Brecher, a member of McGill's Department of Economics and Political Science. In addition to Brecher, Panelists will include Professor King Gordon from the Department of Political Economy of the University of Alberta; Steven Schwebel, legal adviser to the US delegation at the UN; and O.G. Cudjoe, First Secretary of the Ghana High Commission.

On Friday, a panel chaired by Max Cohen of McGill's Faculty of Law will discuss methods of financing the UN. Also present at this discussion at Loyola (1:15 pm) are such eminent guests as Professor L. Gross, Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, and the Hon. E. Olu Sanu, First Secretary and Head of the Permanent Nigerian Delegation to the UN.

Do not read this paragraph

Later that evening, Tom Gould, CBC correspondent at the UN headquarters in New York will address the assembled delegations.

The Model United Nations will come to a finale with a banquet on Saturday at which time the Honourable Milton F. Gregg, V.C., P.C., Chairman of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary)

Committee of the General Assembly.

Throughout this time, the General Assembly will meet for fourteen hours discussion. Since there are both English and French delegates expected, a system of instantaneous translation has been installed.

Library open till 12 for rest of year

The lower floor of the Undergraduate Library will remain open from 10 pm till 12 midnight commencing last night.

The Library Liaison Committee announced that the Library will operate regular services daily till 9:45, at which time students will be asked to vacate all study areas except the lower Undergraduate Library.

There will be no library service available during this time.

This early proclamation of late hours is an attempt by the Committee to better meet the needs of the students.

In conjunction with this effort the Committee is interested in student suggestions regarding the operation of the Library. Such suggestions may be left with John in the Tuckshop, or in the office of the Education Committee in the basement of the Union.

These steps represent the first action taken by the newly formed Library Liaison Committee. Dean Frost, Chairman of the University Library Committee, has established this organization to study problems and make suggestions which will help to improve library operation.

The present Committee is composed of students Bonnie Stern, Ingrid Hall and Robert Rabino-vitch; Professors Onyszchuk and Vogel, the Chairman; and Miss Simon of the Library staff.

CARNIVAL QUEEN NOMINATIONS CLOSE

Nominations for Carnival Queen close today.

All nominations of single girls in second or third year with an average of 55% or over in their last scholastic year, must be signed by twenty-five students, countersigned by the nominee, and handed into John in the Tuckshop before 5 pm today.

A tea will be held tomorrow in RVC for all the candidates.

Those girls who are selected as the five Carnival Princesses will receive a silver bracelet, coat, hat, shoes, gloves, and lingerie. The Queen will receive a scholarship of $100 and each Princess will receive $50.

McGill coed places second in Canada

McGill has come up with a winner!

Joan Clarkin, Engineering Queen, was chosen first runner-up in the Miss Canadian University Snow Queen contest held at Waterloo University College last Friday.

Musa Linke of the University of British Columbia was named Snow Queen.

On Friday afternoon the girls, representing sixteen universities all across Canada, were interviewed by the judges and eight semi-finalists were chosen. At the contest, each girl was asked a question which they drew themselves.

Joan's question was "Do you think women should try to compete with men in the business world?"

ROCKET RICHARD TO OPEN CARNIVAL

The 1964 McGill Winter Carnival will open in grand style on Thursday, February 20, with a live radio show, hockey game, skating show, torchlight parade, twist party, and the crowning of the Carnival Queen.

The evening will begin at 6:15 pm with a "Twist Under the Stars" to be held in Molson Stadium. Radio station CKGM will be broadcasting live.

The McGill Skating Club will launch the festivities at 7 pm with a performance at the Winter Stadium featuring three numbers and a solo by David Langille. The concert is under the direction of Carolyn Tincombe.

Immediately following the skating show Dean F. Kenneth Hare of the Faculty of Arts and Science; Maurice "Rocket" Richard, famed hockey player; Esther Mills, last year's Carnival Queen, and this year's five Carnival Princesses will officially open the Carnival.

At 7:30 pm, the Hockey Redmen will defend the Birks Trophy, won for Collegiate supremacy in the city, against Les Carabins of the University of Montreal. Tickets for the game will go on sale Monday and are 75 cents.

After the game, a Torchlight Parade will wind its way down to the Molson Stadium to join the twisters. The Rocket will lead the procession.

The highlight of the first evening will take place here as the Carnival Queen for 1964 is crowned. The Twist Party will continue after this event until midnight. Refreshments will be available.

Leadership wanted

At McGill University it has always been fashionable to deride the people who hold the "power" positions, the chairmanships, the Presidencies and the editorial jobs in the Students' Society. They form a supposedly self-perpetuating in-group, where friends who are influential reward each other with better jobs, cocktail parties and lavish awards.

As with most facile arguments, this one contains one major fallacy. There are, almost invariably more jobs waiting to be done than there are people willing to do them and any person who wants to work will be quickly accepted. Paradoxically enough, the "power elite" actually places ads in the Daily literally asking people to join its ranks.

In the past week, and indeed in today's Daily, the Executive Applications Director of the SEC has invited applications for the top positions in a host of activities ranging from the Chairmanship of the Blood Drive, MCWA, and Campus Chest to the Producer of the Red and White Revue and the Editor of Forge. Interested parties are asked to fill out simple forms, following which they will be called for interviews by a committee of the SEC.

The entire process is painless. While previous experience in the activity is preferable for obvious reasons, enthusiastic individuals are always welcomed. Nevertheless, the response to the notices in the Daily has been very disappointing. With the exception of a very few positions for which there have been several applications, many posts have attracted no one. If this continues, the past chairmen of the activities in question or other people who are interested in the future of the Students' Society, will have to go looking for their successors. When this happens, a certain amount of inbreeding is certain to result, and no one who is not prepared to make a contribution has any right to complain.

The extra-curricular activities program at McGill offers those who participate, valuable experience in a very wide variety of undertakings. Only an individual who involves himself to some degree is likely to actually discover the cosmopolitan nature of our university, to meet the fascinating people who inhabit or visit McGill and, above all, learn to deal with others, in demanding situations.

The response to the advertisements which are appearing in the Daily will determine the success or failure of next year's activities. There are assuredly many people at McGill capable of playing a leadership role in extra-curricular activities. We hope that some of them will respond to these requests for help. The Students' Society can be as strong or weak as we will make it.

Gault estate unfriendly

Dear Sir:

I was not surprised to read in the Daily about the expropriation of McGill's Gault Estate atop Mont St. Hilaire as proposed by the "Chambre de Commerce de Beloeil". As I was visiting some relatives in Beloeil last spring, I was naturally puzzled by the sight of the mountain and remembered my geography lesson that said about the presence of a very deep crater lake on this long extinct volcano. My cousins agreed to guide me up the mountain but I was in no way prepared for what was going to happen.

After a short drive through a narrow twisting road lined with orchards we arrived at the base of the mountain. A sign at the entrance proclaimed the area "private" property of McGill University. My cousins assured me it meant nothing for me since I was a McGill student; so, we drove on but soon to be stopped by an angry looking man half way up. As I explained politely and tried to be friendly, I got no result and we were ordered off shrewdly.

I felt then and still do that the site ought to be made public for everyone to enjoy, not just a chosen few.

Rod Levesque, Eng. 2

Conservative reaction

Dear Sir:

As a conservative American I wish to express my opinions in respect to your editorial — "A Disastrous Alternative".

The United States, in assuming responsibility for the security of the free world, realizes its primary obligation must be to maintain its own domestic stability. Conservatives believe that restrictions on foreign aid are necessary for a speedy resolution of internal problems. A decrease in foreign aid, leading to a lowering of the tax rate, when combined with a decrease in governmental control of business could conceivably lead to a decrease in unemployment. The feasibility of this plan is as great as that of the liberal policy to destroy enterprises capable of employing a large working force.

The most controversial issue on a national scale is that of civil rights. To clarify a point, the conservative does not wish to oppress the Negro. As Senator Goldwater has said: "The conscience of the Conservative is pricked by anyone who would debase the dignity of the individual human being." The conservative is not against the integration of schools, what he objects to is its forceful institution by the federal government in defiance of the Constitution. Those of liberal persuasion believe this method of integration is justified through the interpretation of the Constitution by the Supreme Court (Brown vs. Board of Education, 1954). The problem, however, is that the Constitution delegates the control of education to the States. Conservatives feel the repeated intrusion by the Supreme Court into the legislative branch of the government, where unrestrained, can serve only to undermine the authority of the Constitution as the law of the land. If there is a human right which is not a civil right (i.e. protected by a law), let's amend the Constitution, not ignore it.

Finally, I would like to reply to your uncalled for, melodramatic exhortation to The Lord. I assure you, so that you may sleep well, that if God was with us during F.D.R.'s term of office, He certainly won't desert us now.

Nancy Lyne, B.A. II

Insurance plan deceptive

Dear Sir:

During the month of January of each year, many fortunate McGill students find in their mail a letter from the Canadian Premier Life Insurance Company advertising their Major Medical Accident and Sickness Plan for university students. This Group Plan was approved and adopted by the McGill Students' Society, and to prove this, the Company encloses a letter of recommendation signed by SEC President, Mr. Gordon.

I am all for this Plan. Among its numerous merits, its low cost is outstanding. It advertises for a "24 hours a day... all year round, including summer vacation" coverage, and one need not even prove that his or her physical shape is in insurable condition at the time of taking out the policy.

One thing, however, bothers me about this insurance. In the letter of recommendation (dated January 1964), and the Company's brochure describing the policy, the following is stated: "The coverage will become effective on the 1st day of October 1963, or on the date your signed application and premium is received at the Montreal Office of Canadian Premier Life, whichever is latest..."

Considering that the application forms are mailed out about mid-January, there is no question as to which event will be "latest". In effect, the student who applies for the policy is insured from the end of January to October 1st of the same year. Little computation shows that the student is insured only three out of seven months of a university year.

But what about those five dreary summer months when the accident prone student spends more time around the house (where most accidents occur anyhow)? Isn't the feeling of security of being insured worth it all? For some, yes. Little thought shows that the majority of students do not need the above-mentioned Insurance Plan during the summer months. Some students go abroad, where policy is ineffective (except in USA), and others are employed by companies which usually have their own accident insurance system.

Thus the YEAR-ROUND, full coverage insurance plan boils down to three months: February to April, during which time the student is much too busy to get involved in accidents, anyway.

The point I want to make with all this should be clear by now; — the above facts seem to indicate that the SEC did not fully investigate the terms of this Insurance Plan, but let its name and its President's signature be used for an advertising gimmick.

If this is the case, I do not blame the present administration only. They merely copied the letters of recommendation from previous years. And so did 40 other universities throughout Canada. I do not blame the Insurance Company either. They would probably go broke if they had to pay for all the accidents from October to January inclusive (these wonderful months include such light extracurricular activities as football, rugby, hockey, skiing, etc.)

I will restate my previous statement now: — I am all for such insurance plan. Yes, I do think it is necessary for students to have accident and sickness insurance, and I do agree that it is the responsibility of the Students' Society to arrange for such to be available at the lowest possible cost. The Group Plan offered by Canadian Premier Life is clearly insufficient.

The situation could be easily corrected to the satisfaction of all involved: the student, the Students' Society, and the Insurance Company. The solution lies within a minute's thought. Since it is difficult to mail out application forms early in October, due to all the formalities involved with registration, why not make the terms of the insurance read: — Policy expires January 31st of following year, provided that the student is still attending university at that time.

In conclusion, for the student's sake, I sincerely expect immediate action in this matter. To this effect, I have written to the Insurance Company also, but I believe that it is up to the Students' Societies of the universities involved to correct the situation.

Barbeau declares himself intellectual para-separatist

Dr. Raymond Barbeau declared himself an "intellectual para-separatist" as opposed to an existentialist separatist, in yesterday's Cercle Français meeting in the Union Ballroom.

Barbeau, a faculty member of l'Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales and founder of Quebec's oldest existing separatist group, l'Alliance Laurentienne, spoke in French on the topic "Who are the Separatists?"

The crises and internal conflicts which are currently plaguing the various separatist movements were acknowledged by Barbeau, but newspapers, as pawns of the political parties, have exaggerated the situation.

Unity among the various groups is not considered important by Barbeau until independence is achieved.

In spite of a certain amount of confusion, he believes that everything is going in the direction of the liberation of Quebec, and that everything is going badly in Ottawa.

As proof of separatism's progress Barbeau cited the Chambre de Commerce des Jeunes du Québec, which has decided to break all ties with the pan-Canadian institution.

Barbeau also noted the emergence of separatist factions in the Liberal Party, and the NDP's inability to hold on to its Quebec riding. He was confident that Social Credit would become separatist within the next two years if their demands were not met by Ottawa.

Separatist groups should not only make propaganda for separatism, but in addition should try to bring this spirit to the surface.

Cultural revolution

Outward evidence of separatism could lead to a sorely needed cultural revolution in Quebec. The pulling power of Quebec intellectuals, the Crétistes, the Union Nationale, and the Partie Socialiste du Québec can ultimately bring about a free and separate French Canada.

Separatists are normal people, stressed Barbeau, and can be found in all parts of Quebec society.

"I think they should," she replied, "but I don't think they can."

The four days the girls spent at Waterloo Joan described as "hectic and great". "They were the most exciting four days I've ever spent," she declared.

Many activities were prepared for the contestants including an Old Quebec Cookout at which Joan, as the only representative from Quebec, officiated. She also inaugurated the "French House", a home for French honours students ruled by a French house mother where only French is to be spoken.

Joan mentioned that she has never been asked so many questions about bilingualism and bilingualism in her life. "Everyone was extremely interested in Quebec's problems," she said.

WHEN IN ROME...

by JUDY ROMAN — Women's Sports Editor

Good news! Lots of news! The women's hockey team dropped two close contests at Kingston on Saturday in the Eastern Section Preliminary Intercollegiate Tournament. Despite the pair of losses, 2-1 to Queen's and 1-0 to Macdonald, the team came up with most impressive performances. Standouts for McGill in the two games were Helen "Rocket" Softley, Bea Taylor and Barb Rowat.

In Intercollegiate badminton McGill placed fourth. Despite the low standing the team did remarkably well considering the calibre of the competition.

The McGill Women's Riflery Club Intramural Competition was held at the Currie Gym. Sharon Nicol came out on top with 398 out of a possible 400 points and runner up Merial Beament was not far behind with a score of 397.

The hockey intramural play-offs take place today at 1 pm at the Winter Stadium. The Thetas will battle against Arts & Science. This promises to be an intense game since the last time they played the result was a tie.

The time has come for a new president of the WAA to be chosen. Any nominee must persuade twenty five women to sign their names and then submit this list to RVC. It is suggested that nominees should have had some experience in executive work. Names should be submitted by March 2nd. The executive will be chosen on March 11th at the Awards Banquet.

SPORTS DAY

Sports Day takes place this Saturday at McGill. The bowling competition between Toronto, Queen's and McGill is scheduled for 9:30 - 12 at Pines Bowling Academy. Sir George Williams University will compete against McGill with rifles at 10 - 12:30 at the Currie Gym. The fencing tournament between Toronto, McMaster and McGill is planned for 9:30 am to 1 pm at the Currie Gym. At the same time a dance symposium will take place at RVC. The participants are from Toronto, Rochester and Skidmore College. All competitions and demonstrations are open to students, in fact they are urged to attend.

The girls participating in the Winter Carnival have cruelly been refused rides to their practices on Monday, Thursday and Friday, despite the zealous efforts of Peter Jackson, who was in charge of transportation. This is a fine demonstration of the keen spirit of McGillians!

I leave you now, on this sour note; however, I must mention the ski house once again. Now that winter has returned, this deluxe chalet is sure to be populated. I have it on good authority that weather is beautiful up there and ski conditions are excellent. Take a final fling before exams — go up north.

Cagemen take on Warriors in mid-week action tonight

The Redmen return to C.I.B.L. action in a doubleheader against Loyola this evening at the Arthur Currie Gym. Saturday night sees the McGill team matching its strength with University of Windsor (Assumption), one of the best college teams in Canada.

In two previous games back in November, the Redmen had little trouble in disposing of the Warriors and, having failed to win a single OQAA encounter this season, hope to pick up a welcomed win tonight. The visitors are led by high-scoring centre Charlie Smith but do not have much in the way of depth to back him up. In contrast, McGill features more of a team effort with George Lengvari, Bruce Randall, Bob Mingle and Dave Gillman sharing the load.

Saturday's tilt with U. of Windsor, last year's title winners, will doubtless reward any fans who turn out with a fine exhibition of basketball at its best.

Game times tonight are 7 and 8:30 pm.

T.C. Douglas...

the Prime Minister brought out a revised scheme. Douglas called it "a retreat, a sell-out to insurance companies."

As for education, Douglas inveighed against the small share of corporate and income taxes which the provinces receive. He said that the provinces must have 50% of the aggregate of these taxes to meet education costs which will double in a decade.

The University of Montreal Carabins split its two weekend games with league-leading Toronto and McMaster but still gained ground in the OQAA standings. On Friday night the Carabins dropped a 7-3 decision to the Blues — their first loss of the season. However, they bounced back on Saturday afternoon to edge the Marlins 7-6 in Dundas.

Andre Boucher led Montreal riors. Larry Jones, an ex-Redmen star, scored one of the Golden Gael goals. over the Marlins with three goals aided by Jean Delorme with two, and Jean-Jacques Granger and Gilles Lefort with one apiece. McMaster marksmen were Jim McLelland, Bob Apps, Gary Spoor, Pete Randle, John Savage, and Larry Keleher.

On Friday night Queen's gained its first victory of the season by posting a convincing 13-8 win over the hapless Waterloo War-
